Do you hate when a coworker writes "per my last email" in a message?

If so, you're not alone: People rate that as the most passive-aggressive phrase in workplace emails. The infographic (below) summarizes findings from the poll of 1,000 workers in the United States, which was conducted by Preply. It looks at the 10 phrases rated as the most passive-aggressive by workers as well as the five communication behaviors that workers rate as the most passive-aggressive. Check out the infographic:
